On The Lighter Side!

A man was lying in bed the other night when the doorbell rang. Half asleep, he got out of bed, put on his dressing gown and opened the front door. There, standing on the doorstep, was a six-foot-tall cockroach. Before he had time to shut the door, it leapt on him, punching and kicking with all six of its legs. All he could do was cover his head with his arms while it laid into him. After several minutes it got tired and scuttled away. He closed the door and staggered back to bed. A few hours later the doorbell rang again. This time he was half delirious. Without thinking, he rushed to the door and opened it. The cockroach was back and all he could do was yelp as it pounced on him and began pummeling him once again. This time it kept going for a full ten minutes and he was so exhausted he couldn't even make it back to bed so he slept on the floor in the hallway. The next day he was in so much pain he took himself straight to the doctor. His heart sank as he saw the size of the queue coming out of the surgery door, but he stood at the end of it, patiently (excuse the pun!) waiting. The next moment, the doctor walked out of this office and looked along the queue. When he saw the man the doctor waved and said, "You, come into my office." He followed him and sat down in the patient's chair. "Let me guess," the doctor began, "you were awoken by the doorbell in the middle of the night and a giant cockroach beat you up!" "How do you know that?" he asked. "There's a nasty bug going round!"
